BYRON.

"His soul is dark as Erebus."

Satan his harp to Byron gave,
And said—"Go, sweep it well;
Thy theme, the murderer's reeking grave—
Thy theme, the feasts of hell.

"The place of sculls thy home shall be,
Thy bed the couch of shame;
Plunge in pollution's putrid sea—
There build thy hope of fame.

"To misery's child new misery add—
Tell him no pardon's given:
Drive, drive the shuddering sinner mad—
And break his hold on heaven!

"Sweep, sweep the lyre to godless themes—
For vice a chaplet twine;
Of horrors be thy waking dreams—
Of horrors that are mine;

"Of agonies in hell that rise—
Of darkness that is felt;
Of reeling worlds—of sund'ring skies—
Of terrors yet unspelt!

"Dark be the picture—let no light,
Not one dim ray illume;
Dark, dark as never-ending night—
As self-destroyer's doom!

"Man's hope, man's peace for ever mar—
Eclipse religion's sun;
Tread out Salvation's golden star—
And see thy work well done!"

He said—his lordship took the lyre,
And swept the strings along;
Whilst Satan stole from heaven the fire!
And turn'd the godless song!

BOSTON BARD.

ENIGMA.

If it be true, as some folks say,
"Honor depends on pedigree;"
Then stand by—clear the way:
Ye sons of heroes, fam'd of yore,
And you the sons of old Glendower,
And let us have fair play.

And ye, who boast, from ages dark,
A pedigree from Noah's ark,
Painted on parchment nice:
I'm older still, for I was there,
As first of all I did appear
With Eve in Paradise.

And I was Adam, Adam I;
And I was Eve, and Eve was I,
In spite of wind or weather:
But mark me—Adam was not I,
Neither was Mrs. Adam I,
Unless they were together.

Suppose then Eve and Adam talking—
With all my heart, but were they walking,
There ends all simile:
For though I've tongue, and often talk,
And legs too, yet when e'er I walk
That puts an end to me—

Not such an end but that I've breath,
Therefore to such a kind of death
I made but small objections;
For soon again I come to view,
And though a Christian, yet 'tis true
I die by resurrection.

FRAGMENT.

The following beautiful and touching fragment is taken from the Charleston Courier. As it is signed P. and as we observe that a Dr. Percival arrived a few weeks previous to its date, at Charleston, from New Haven, we ascribe it to the poet of that name, whose compositions we have, heretofore had occasion to celebrate. In our humble opinion, no American has ever manifested greater poetical genius. Much of his verse would do honour to any European bard of the day.—Nat. Gaz.

He comes not—I have watch'd the moon go down,
But yet he comes not—once it was not so.
He thinks not how these bitter tears do flow,
The while he holds his riot in that town.
Yet he will come, and chide, and I shall weep;
And he will wake my infant from its sleep,
To blend its feeble wailing with my tears.
O! how I love a mother's watch to keep,
Over those sleeping eyes, that smile, which cheers
My heart, though sunk in sorrow, fix'd and deep.
I had a husband once, who lov'd me—now
He ever wears a frown upon his brow,
And feeds his passion on a wanton's lip,
As bees, from laurel flow'rs a poison sip:
But yet, I cannot hate—O! there were hours,
When I could hang for ever on his eye,
And Time, who stole with silent swiftness by,
Strew'd, as he hurried on, his path with flow'rs.
I lov'd him then—he lov'd me too—my heart
Still finds its fondness kindle, if he smile:
The memory of our loves will ne'er depart;
And though he often sting me with a dart,
Venom'd and barb'd, and waste upon the vile,
Caresses which his babe and mine should share;
Though he should spurn me, I will calmly bear
His madness—and should sickness come, and lay
Its paralyzing hand upon him, then
I would, with kindness, all my wrongs repay,
Until the penitent should weep, and say,
How injured, and how faithful I had been.

Women are certainly not at all inferior to men in resolution, and perhaps much less in courage, than is commonly imagined: the reason they appear so is, because women affect to be more afraid than they really are, and men pretend to be less.

THOUGHTS ON WINTER.

The poets have numbered among the felicities of the golden age, an exemption from the change of seasons, and a perpetuity of spring; but we agree with an elegant writer on this subject, that such poets have not made sufficient provision for that insatiable demand for new gratifications which seems particularly to characterize the nature of man. Our sense of delight is in a great measure comparative, and arises at once from the sensations which we feel, and those which we remember: thus ease, after torment, is pleasure for a time, and we are very agreeably recreated when the body, chilled with the weather, is gradually recovering its natural tepidity; but the joy ceases when we have forgot the cold; we must fall below ease again, if we desire to rise above it, and purchase new felicity by voluntary pain. It is therefore not unlikely, that however the fancy may be amused with the description of regions in which no wind is heard but the gentle zephyr, and no scenes are displayed but vallies enamelled with unfading flowers, and woods waving their perennial verdure, we should soon grow weary of uniformity, find our thoughts languish for want of other subjects, call on heaven for our wonted round of seasons, and think ourselves liberally recompensed for the inconveniencies of summer and winter, by new perceptions of the calmness and mildness of the intermediate variations.

Every season has its particular power of striking the mind. The nakedness and asperity of the wintry world fills the beholder with pensive and profound astonishment; as the variety of the scene is lessened, its grandeur is increased; and the mind is swelled at once by the mingled ideas of the present and the past; of the beauties which have vanished from the eyes, and the waste and desolation that are now before them.

Yet let us reflect on the blessings Heaven grants us at this season, which appears to us so severe. The frost and cold prevent many hurtful vapours in the higher regions of the atmosphere from falling upon us, and even purify the air. Far from being always bad for our health, it often strengthens it, and preserves the humours from putrefaction, which a constant heat would certainly occasion. If the vapours which collect in the atmosphere were always to fall in rain, the earth would be too soft and wet, our bodies would be too full of humours, and too much relaxed; whereas the cold braces and promotes the circulation of the blood. In very hot countries, and where the winters are rainy and wet, serious and mortal diseases are much more frequent than elsewhere. We are told by travellers, that in Greenland, where the ground is covered with mountains of ice, and where in winter the days are only four or five hours long, the air is very wholesome, clear and light; and, except a few complaints in the chest and eyes (occasioned partly by the quality of the food), they have seldom there the disorders so common in Europe. It is also certain that the constitution of the human body varies according to the different climates; consequently, the inhabitants of the northern countries have constitutions adapted to extreme cold, and are generally strong and robust. As man, though active by choice, and though labour is necessary to him, is still glad to interrupt his employments to taste the sweets of sleep; so also nature yields to the change of seasons, and takes a pleasure in it, because in reality it contributes towards our welfare and happiness.

THE MOST WRETCHED STATE OF MAN.

In a conference held between some Greek and Indian philosophers, in the presence of Chosroes, king of Persia, the following question was proposed for solution.

"What is the most wretched state in which a man can find himself in this world?"

A Greek philosopher said it was to pass a feeble old age in the midst of extreme poverty. An Indian asserted that it was to suffer sickness of the body accompanied by pain of the mind. As for me, said the vizier Buzurgemir, I think that the greatest of miseries a man can experience in this world, is to see himself near the close of life without having practised virtue.

This opinion received the general approbation of this assembly of sages, and Chosroes ordered that it should be engraved on a marble table, and fixed up in the principal square of Ispahan, to offer to the people a subject of meditation, and remain an eternal lesson of wisdom.

Time, which devours all things, has destroyed this tablet; and in Persia, as with us, it is forgotten that the greatest of miseries in this world is to approach the close of life without having practised virtue.

Every year, as we grow older, appears shorter than the preceding, and the reason of it is this: all our ideas of time must be derived from that portion of it, in which we have already existed, and that must be the standard by which we measure it; as this standard therefore extends itself by our living longer, so every period must appear shorter in porportion to it: thus when we have lived ten years, one year is the existence; but when we have lived eighty, it is then but the eightieth part of the same term.

[For the Saturday Evening Post.]

THE MISCELLANIST—No. 2.

"The north wind driveth away rain, so doth an angry countenance a backbiting tongue."
PROVERBS, Chap. 25, ver. 23.

The writings of Solomon abound with many passages particularly expressive of that wisdom and perspicacity of which, in a very especial manner, he is said to have been possessed; and which deservedly place him in the rank of those authors who, by their indefatigable labours for the promotion of virtue, have been the benefactors of mankind.

In the proverb above quoted, this celebrated author plainly points out the remedy for an evil, which for its malignancy stands unparalleled in the catalogue of vices, and which, though we are pleased to call the age in which we live, enlightened, though we may suppose that the light of the gospel has driven away the darkness of vice, yet prevails to an alarming extent amongst us. The evil to which I allude is DETRACTION, the great source whence many of the miseries of life flow, and the most destructive evil that was ever permitted to pervade the ranks of civilized society.

If we trace this monster from the commencement of his operations and ingeniously concerted schemes, to their final completion, we shall find that he introduces himself under the disguise of engaging innocence, that he successively assumes the placid smile of virtue, the cheerful countenance of conviviality, the threatening frown of might, and the distorted look of revenge, all accommodated to the diversity of the principles and dispositions of those, whom he is endeavouring to bring to eternal misery. Beginning his diabolical career in the bosom of peaceful society, he demolishes the tabernacles of Piety and Religion, prostrates the sacred temples of Charity, Benevolence and Love, and introduces that detestable system of wickedness, approved by Satan and his angels. The seeds of discord which he has sown, ripen into age and produce all the shocking consequences of strife, revenge, devastation and death. He is capable of transforming civilized man into the savage murderer, of converting the populous city into a desert waste, and of exciting intestine war, replete with the most terrible extremes of cruelty and bloodshed. Oh! then, that those shining virtues of heavenly origin, Piety and Beneficence, might lastingly prevail among us, that our nation might be love, and peace her borders, that happiness and prosperity might from their meridian seats, diffuse their brightening beams over this happy community, and joy animate the countenance of all; let detraction be spurned from our presence as our most invidious enemy, and let his "backbiting tongue" always be silenced by the "angry countenance" and disapproving frown of the peaceful and good.—Let us for the preservation of love and good order, sedulously labour to suppress such idle reports concerning those, to the prejudice of whom detraction may have invented, and the "backbiting tongue" circulated. If in our intercourse with the world any should give cause for offence, in consequence of which we may feel disposed to promote the circulation of reports prejudicial to the interest of such, let the reflection arise, that every pilgrim of this vale of tears, possesses his bad as well as his good qualities, that forgiveness is one of the noblest virtues that we are capable of exercising, and that to magnify rather than diminish the credit of our neighbour is the surest means of establishing our own.

TRUTH AND SINCERITY.

We should labour to excite in children a detestation for all that is mean, cunning or false; to inspire them with a spirit of openness, honour and candour; making them feel how noble it is, always to speak the simple, unadulterated truth—whether it tell for or against themselves. But to effect this, our example must uniformly concur with our instructions. Our whole behaviour to them should be fair and without artifice. We should never deceive them, never employ cunning to gain our ends, or to spare present trouble. For instance, to assure a child that the medicine he is about to take, is pleasant, when it is not so. Artifice is generally detected, even by children. There is much in the old proverb, "a cunning trick helps but once, and hinders ever after."

Great caution is required in making promises; but when made, they should see that we are rigid in performing them; our word passed, must not be broken.

The meanness of tale bearing and detraction should be strongly impressed upon the mind in early life; and children reminded, that, not only duty, but a sense of honour, should lead them not to speak that of an absent person which they would not speak were he present.

If we have grounds to suppose a child guilty of misconduct, it is better to ascertain the truth by our own observation, or the evidence of others, than by a forced confession from himself. Yet sometimes it may be necessary to question him in order to find out the certainty. This must be done with great caution, not with that vehemence and hurry so commonly employed on such occasions; but with calmness and affection; cautioning him against answering in haste; reminding him of the importance and happy consequences of speaking truth; of our willingness to forgive, if he freely confesses his fault, and shows himself upright and honorable in his conduct.

And to establish an habitual regard to the principle of honesty, children should not be permitted to pick up the smallest article, without enquiring to whom it belongs. This easy rule, and asking leave even when very young, before they take any thing, will give them a strong regard to the property of others. To habituate children to ask permission, is equivalent to seeking advice in more advanced years.

THE ORPHALINE ASYLUM.

The Orphan Asylum at Philadelphia, (says the Baltimore Morning Chronicle,) will shortly arise like the Phœnix, more glorious from its ashes. However we may lament the loss of the property contributed by the hand of benevolence and philanthropy, by the ravages of the fiery element, we have no cause in such cases to apprehend, that the benefits resulting from such an establishment will be finally lost. Such melancholy catastrophes constitute so powerful an appeal to public sensibility, that every heart feels the pressure, and every hand is extended for contribution.

We have a Female Orphaline establishment in Baltimore; it has held on the quiet unpresuming tenor of its way for several years, and has been constantly devoted to the exercise of unostentatious benevolence. It has been employed in the education of those unhappy children of the softer sex, who are bereft of their parents, and patiently in the performance of a christian duty, supplies the wants occasioned by the king of terrors. Now, if this little establishment had encountered a similar calamity, if it had been burnt to ashes with the tenants of its hospitality, how soon would public enthusiasm and sensibility have reared a magnificent fabric on its ruins?

But this establishment has not, thanks to our Creator, required such an awful stimulus to awaken public benevolence. It has wrought its way silently and gradually, but we trust permanently and effectually into notice. Like the silent but effective influence of a good and virtuous character, it steals upon the hearts of all degrees, and grows more luminous the more it is examined. Converts gained in this way, prove steady and stedfast friends, either in public or in private life; friends, whose confidence and assistance may be calculated on, as well in the hour of adversity, as in the blaze of prosperity. It is a partnership, an intercommunity of soul, that binds with cords of adamant. This is a treasure, of which we cannot be deprived, except that we prove ourselves by our actions, unworthy of its possession. As an evidence that our Orphaline establishment has been thus working its way, we will state this fact, that the managers contemplate the erection of a building, and that they received a spontaneous offer of a donation of one thousand dollars, whenever they are ready to commence their operations.

ARDENT SPIRITS.

The Boston Recorder, in noticing a sermon preached before the Massachusetts Society for the suppression of Intemperance, observes—"Ten thousand lives are yearly lost to the United States by intemperance! More than thirty millions of dollars are annually expended for this mortal poison! All respectable physicians agree that ardent spirits give no nourishment to the system, but form a 'polluted fountain of melancholy, diseases and death!' They blunt the moral faculties and intellectual powers. 'Of 87 persons admitted to the Insane Hospital N. York, last year, the insanity of 27 was caused by intemperance.'"

The following extract from this sermon ought to be perused by all who remain insensible to the evils produced by ardent spirits:—

"I knew, a father who doated on his children. He was regular, apparently, in his habits, tender, perhaps to excess, in his affections, provident in regard to his family, respectful in public worship. But he fell into habits of intemperance. In one of the paroxysms of his disease, this once tender father pursued his own son with an uplifted axe in his hands, and would have put an end to his life, had he not been forcibly prevented.

"During the winter session of the General Court, and just after leaving the chamber of the Supreme Executive, where it happened to be my duty to attend, I was called by a ragged, shivering boy, whose sobs and tears almost prevented my understanding him, to visit his mother. His father, he told me, had split open her head with a stick of wood, and she was not expected to live. Shocked and full of horror, I followed him. On entering the place, I found the woman in a crib formed of rough boards nailed against the wall, in the depth of poverty and distress. Never before was I so struck with the contrast in the conditions of mankind. Scarcely could I realize, while standing in the cold mud of that cabin, that I was in the same town in which I had been just officiating before the Throne of Grace. The woman could speak. She told me that she had begged wood to make her and her child comfortable—that her husband insisted on taking some of it to a neighbouring grocery to buy rum—that she could not consent, and resisted; and that she received the wound in her head from his hand! He died not long after, a victim of his intemperance."

AGRICULTURE.

Agriculture is the most certain source of strength, and wealth, and independence.—Commerce flourishes by circumstances precarious, contingent, transitory, almost as liable to change as the winds and waves that waft it to our shores. She may well be termed the youngest sister, for, in all emergencies, she looks to agriculture, both for defence and for supply. The earth, indeed, is doubly grateful, inasmuch as she not only repays forty fold to the cultivator, but reciprocally improves its improver, rewarding him with strength, and health, and vigour. Agriculture, therefore, is the true officina militum; and in her brave and hardy peasantry, she offers a legitimate and trusty sword to those rulers that duly appreciate her value, and court her alliance. It is, however, more easy to convert husbandmen into excellent soldiers, than to imitate Romulus, who could at will reconvert them again. He first moulded those materials that conquered the world: peasantry victorious in war, laborious in peace, despisers of sloth, prepared to reap the bloodless harvest of the sickle, after having secured that of the sword. The only enjoyments, says Dion, that Romulus left to freemen were, agriculture and warfare; for he observed that men so employed are more temperate, less entangled in the pursuits of forbidden love, and subject to that kind of avarice only which leads them not to injure one another, but to enrich themselves at the expense of the enemy. But finding that each of these occupations, separate from the other, is imperfect, and produced murmurs, instead of appointing one part of the men to till the earth, and the other to lay waste the enemy's country, according to the institution of the Lacedæmonians, he ordered the same persons to exercise the employments both of husbandmen and of soldiers; and accustomed them, in time of peace, to live in the country, and cultivate the land, except when it was necessary for them to come to market, upon which occasions they were to meet in the city, in order to traffic; and to that end he appointed a market to be held every ninth day. And, in time of war, he taught them the duty of soldiers, and not to yield to any other, in the fatigues or the advantages that attend it.

Anecdotes of Distinguished Characters.

Soon after Dr. Swift was made dean of St. Patricks, he was loitering one Sunday in the afternoon at the house of Dr. Raymond, with whom he dined at Trim (a little town near Dublin, of which he was vicar:) the bell had rung—the parishioners were assembled for evening prayers—and Dr. Raymond was going to church, which was scarce two hundred yards from his house. "Raymond," said the Dean, "I'll lay you a crown I will begin prayers before you this afternoon." "I accept your wager," replied Dr. Raymond, and immediately they both ran as fast as they could towards the church. Raymond, who was the nimbler man of the two, arrived first at the door, and when he entered, walked decently towards the reading desk. Swift never slackened his pace, but running up the aisle, left Dr. Raymond in the middle of it, and stepping into the reading desk, without putting on a surplice, or opening the prayer book, began the liturgy with an audible voice, and continued to repeat the service sufficiently long to win his wager.

The Duke de Roclore, the favorite wit and buffoon of Louis XIV. was in his person far from being agreeable; his countenance was rather forbidding, and his person ill formed. Another nobleman, whose person was even inferior to that of Roclore, having killed his antagonist in a duel, applied to the duke for his interest and protection, knowing it was the only channel through which he could obtain a pardon. The duke readily engaged in his friend's interest, and fairly rallied the king into a compliance. After the king had finished a fit of laughter, and given his royal promise, he enquired of Roclore what could possibly induce him to be so strenuous in his intercession. "I will tell your majesty," said the facetious duke, "if he had suffered, I should have been the ugliest man in France."

When Oliver Cromwell, attended by Thurlow, once went to dine in the city, the populace rent the air with their congratulations. "Your Highness," said the secretary, "may see, by this, that you have the voice of the people, as well as the voice of God!" "As to God," replied the protector, "I will not talk about him here; but for the people, they would be just as noisy and perhaps more rejoiced, if you and I were going to be hanged."

CURRENTS OF THE OCEAN.

Nassau, (N. P.) Jan. 30.—About ten days ago a bottle was picked up by Mr. Samuel Knowles, on the N. E. side of Eleuthera, in about lat. 25, 30, and long. 76, 20, containing a slip of paper, on which was written—"United States frigate Congress, May 24, 1821. Homeward bound from China. Lat. 27, 51, N. long. 66, 50, W. All's well? J. H. S. E. P."

On the 8th of September was caught a Sea Pigeon, near to the Isle of France, in the Indian Ocean, with the following inscription tied to its tail:

> I've seen the Betsey far at sea,
> And where you soon may find it,
> Whatever name your ship may be,
> Please write her name behind it!"

"Brig Betsey, captain Robert Smith, at sea, lat. 34, 13, S. long. 53, 8, W. from Buenos Ayres, bound to London. This is to ascertain the distance and courses this bird may fly from this until it may be caught, and you will oblige me by inserting it in the public papers. Geo. Lord."—This bird was caught in the American ship Flora, from Calcutta, bound to Philadelphia.

The National Advocate, of New York, notices a late annual meeting of the "Krout Club" of that city, held "at the house of Johannus Niclaus Grenzbach, where they feasted on Sour Crout, Smoked Goose, Sausages, and such seasonable delicacies." At this meeting, in addition to the many honors previously conferred, the learned Dr. Samuel L. Mitchill was elected Grand Krout, which is the distinguishing appellation of the presiding officer. In an appropriate address upon the subject, the learned doctor naturally enough extolled the superlative virtues of cabbage, the nutritious qualities of which, to use his own expression, were such as to "excite a smile on the lips of that useful domestic, the cow."

Emigration.—We perceive that a society called the "British Union Society," is now forming at Doncaster, by a number of religious families, for the purpose of establishing an agricultural colony in the state of Illinois, in the United States. A general fund is to be raised by subscription for the purchase of land, stock, &c.; and a common store is to be kept, from which the colonists will be supplied with goods at wholesale prices. Religious teachers will be appointed, and the children will be taught useful learning. Many other regulations are proposed in the plan, with a view to ensure the success of the emigrants.

Plaid Cloaks.—No man can enjoy any comfort of our present deplorable weather, unless he provides himself with a good plaid cloak. It is the most formidable shield against the piercing invasions of winter, which rudely runs its hand into your bosom, and seizes the sources of life. Besides the grateful warmth of the plaid, there is a cheerfulness in its colour, and an expansive benevolence in its folds, which enables you to protect any shivering associate, as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings.—Charleston Courier.

Warning.—Two small lads in Belfast, (Me.) sons of John Merriam, Esq. and Mr. Geo. Hopkins, on the 5th instant, ventured out on a thin and brittle sheet of ice below the wharves. Outcries first drew attention to the spot, when they were seen trying to support themselves by the edge of the ice, which constantly gave way under their pressure. Efforts were made to save them, but they perished, in the presence of agonized parents, brothers, sisters and friends, (who could render them no assistance) just before the boat reached them.

Panama Independent.—By accounts received, it appears that the Isthmus of Panama has declared its Independence by the voluntary will of the people. The inhabitants took the opportunity to emancipate themselves, afforded by the absence of Gen. Cruz Murgeon, who had left Panama, in order, in combination with the Spanish functionaries who govern at Quito, to attack Gunyaquil. It is stated that Coro has again fallen into the hands of the royalists, and that Bolivar left St. Fe in November, with a force of 9000 men, including the division of General Suere, for the purpose of endeavouring to unite Quito to the other departments of Colombia.

Shocking Accident.—We are informed, that on Friday afternoon, 15th inst. about dusk, an elderly woman named Rowan, was overtaken on the road between Mount Ephraim and Chew's Landing, New Jersey, by several wood-waggons returning from the ferry. She being very deaf and the teamsters having collected in one waggon in the rear, and suffering their horses to travel without them, the leading horse of the first waggon knocked her down before she was aware of their near approach, and shocking to relate, all the waggons in company, (four or five) ran over her—when taken up she was so dreadfully bruised and mangled as to survive but three hours.

Fire.—On Saturday night last, some villains broke open and set fire to the house of General Solomon Van Rensselaer, in the neighbourhood of Albany, which, together with much valuable property was entirely consumed. The family of Gen. Van Rensselaer reside in the city Albany; but his son alone slept in the house on the night of the fire. Gov. Clinton has issued his proclamation, offering a reward of five hundred dollars for the apprehension of the perpetrators of this crime and Gen. Van Rensselaer, offers five hundred more.

The editor of the New-York Evening Post has seen a letter mentioning that the house was gallantly defended by the General's son, who slept in it alone, with fire arms, for some time; and also, that anonymous letters have been received by the Patroon and by Mr. Oliver Kane, of Albany, cautioning them to be also ready, for that their turn comes next.

Our readers may recollect that the same house was attacked by a gang of villains, a few weeks since, one of whom was wounded by Gen. Van Rensselaer's son, upon which they made off.

A correspondent asks permission to suggest, through the medium of the National Intelligencer, that, considered as a revenue measure, "a tax of 25 cents per gallon on certain Domestic distilled spirits, would give us an additional revenue of five millions of dollars, besides eminently improving the public morals, and promoting the general prosperity of our country."

The U. S. schr. Alligator, Lieut. Comdt. Stockton, will proceed, forthwith, from this port to the West Indies, for the safety and protection of navigation from pirates. The time of service of the crew of the Alligator has expired, but, upon being told by Lieut. Stockton of the cruise on which their country wished them to engage, to employ three months, they gave their commander three cheers, and entered, to a man.

Washington, Feb. 21.

The Board of Commissioners for deciding on claims under the Spanish Treaty are most industriously engaged in the business confided to them. Important points are occasionally decided. A decision was yesterday announced, we understand, which is favorable to the admission of a description of claims, embracing a considerable amount, viz: those cases of captures by French privateers, when the vessels were carried into Spanish ports, and the prizes disposed of by the captors without the form of trial or condemnation.

LAMENTABLE ACCIDENT.

On Saturday the 2d inst. a free coloured man, assisted in loading a sloop with wood on the shore of the Hudson river, about 14 miles above the city of New-York. This being accomplished, the man started about 4 o'clock, P. M. for home across the mountain, and the sloop repaired for New-York. The mountain here is excessively high, probably from 3 to 400 feet—and in some places perpendicular rocks. The black man had nearly ascended the mountain by a difficult pathway, when he slipped and slided out of the path upwards of 30 feet, when one of his legs became entangled between two sapplings leaving his body swinging down hill. In this perilous and suffering condition he remained till next day at 10 o'clock, when he was discovered by a woman and her son. They gave the alarm and two men were speedily obtained, who released the prisoner after cutting down one of the sapplings. He then sat up, and asked for water, of which they had none—but took a little ardent spirit. He said he felt a little better, and related his fall and sufferings. Soon after he clapped both his hands to his head, and exclaimed, "O! O my head!" and in less than half an hour expired. It was the opinion of Doctor Fraeligh, that if his position had been less suddenly changed, it would have been better for him. This unfortunate man was distinguished for his sobriety, honesty and industry. Faithful to his master, when a slave—Prudent and faithful to his family since he obtained his freedom. The substance of the above affecting relation was communicated to the editors, by a correspondent in Bergen county. [Newark Cent.

Richmond, (Ind.) Feb. 2.

A shocking accident happened a few days since in Union County, Indiana. On the 21st of last month, Henderson Harvey took down his gun, for what purpose we have not been informed, and, not knowing the gun to be charged, he snapped it, with the intention of terrifying a small boy that was standing by, but, to his astonishment, it fired and lodged its contents in the body of his father! The old gentleman was sitting in his chair, only a few feet from his unhappy son. The ball struck him in the hip, and lodged in the opposite side. He lived twenty-four hours, and died in exquisite pain!

Trenton, Feb. 18.

Another Mail Gone.—On the night of the 14th inst. the way mail, on the road from New-Brunswick to Kingston, was either stolen or lost from the mail stage; the driver, it seems, cannot tell which. On the evening of the 16th, however, the lost mail was brought to the Trenton Post Office, but where it had been or where found was not stated.

From the New-Haven Journal.

More Villainy.—On Friday evening about tea-time, the currier's shop of Mr. Dwight, of this city, was discovered to be on fire, but was fortunately extinguished before it suffered material injury. On examination a fire was found kindled immediately under the stair of the basement story, one between the sleeper and floor of the same story, one under the stairs in the second story, and one contiguous to the wall in the third story, which being in contact with pine boards, immediately broke out and discovered the mischief. Suspicion resting on an apprentice to Mr. D. by the name of Clark Jacobs, about 17 years old, he was taken before Justice Hunt for examination, where he plead guilty.—He is bound over to await his trial before the Superior Court in August.

On the same evening, between 6 and 7 o'clock, a trunk belonging to James Ward, Esq. of Hartford, was stolen from Mott's Hotel. Only a few minutes previous to the theft, Mr. Ward had taken from the trunk from 20 to 30,000 dollars for our Banks. In this case, suspicion rested upon a mulatto fellow by the name of Way, and on searching his house the same evening, the trunk was found. Way himself was apprehended the next morning, and on confession of the fact, was committed for trial before the next County Court.

Lynchburg, (Vir.) February 15.

On Tuesday evening last an immense assemblage of the citizens of Lynchburg, was gratified by a solemn and impressive sermon from GEORGE WITHY, of the Society of Friends, from England.

Daring Robbery.—On Saturday morning last, about 11 o'clock, as a lady was going to visit a distressed family in Prosperous Alley, a stout negro man came up to her, and forced her Reticle out of her hand, and made his escape through an adjoining alley. It contained about six dollars in silver, and a linen cambric handkerchief marked E. M.

Generous Emulation.—Three persons in Dorset, (Ver.) on the 1st of January, undertook to see who would present to the pastor of their parish the largest load of wood—the one who brought the smallest, to pay a handsome forfeiture of the generous beverage of the country. The competitors accordingly furnished the loads, the one measuring five, the other ten, and the last twenty-five cords of hard wood!

The jury of inquest returned a verdict of wilful and premeditated murder. The unhappy culprit was immediately taken into custody, and remains committed for trial.

The Tables turned.—Some unfeeling and ill-behaved people, inhabitants of the Niagara jail, a few days since exchanged places with their keeper, whom they bound, gagged, and locked up snugly in the dungeon. They then took his gold watch, presuming it was of no further use to him, and to prevent him from doing any harm to himself in his new situation, also took his sword and pistols, and made their escape. They have all been re-taken.

FOREIGN ARTICLES.

A Thief taken in a rat trap.—Yesterday morning the maid servant of Mr. Hassey, stockbroker, in Noble street, being absent from the kitchen, attending on her master and mistress, a boy sneaked down stairs with a bundle of fire-wood in his hand, and finding the cupboard door open, he commenced his work of plunder, but in his hurry he overlooked a large rat trap that was set on one of the shelves, and his hand was caught in it; the pain he underwent caused him to scream out aloud, and in endeavouring to extricate his hand he threw down several plates, &c. The noise caused his apprehension, and he was committed for trial.—Lond. paper.

Cunning of the fox.—At the Golden Bear Inn, Reading, a young fox had a few years since been taught to go into the wheel and turn the jack. After he had thus officiated for some time, he escaped, and regained his native wood—Here he met the fate common to his species; he was pursued by the hounds, and ran through the town of Reading, reached the inn, and springing over the half door of the kitchen, jumped into the wheel and resumed his occupation, in the place where he had been brought up by which means he saved his life.

WASHINGTON.

The anniversary of the natal day of the most illustrious of Heroes—the best of men, and the wisest of Statesmen—General GEORGE WASHINGTON, was celebrated, in this city, yesterday, with the usual ceremonials of respect to his memory, and by many demonstrations of the estimation in which that Liberty is held, which his valour, his courage, his perseverance, and his steady and determined resistance to foreign oppression, procured for his fellow-citizens, and for their posterity. It is useless at this day to dwell upon the merits of a man of whom, when his death was announced in the Senate, the President, Adams, declared that foregoing history furnished no parallel to his virtues—for whose great services the country could offer no commensurate equivalent, and who should, or ought to be for ever after looked upon as its proper Father. It was said in Europe by a very distinguished and celebrated Barrister, whose declamations have won the admiration of the world, that Scipio was just; Hannibal, courageous; Cæsar, brave; Brutus, patriotic, but that it was reserved for a single man, to blend all these qualities together, and, to concentrate in one glow of associated beauty, the model of every artist, and the pride of every master, and, that that man was the American General, GEORGE WASHINGTON.—This comment was uttered in the purlieus of the British Court, it was echoed enthusiastically at the Banquet at which it was delivered, its tones reached our own shore, and the echo was reiterated.

Whilst all the world acknowledge his great and unexampled merits, and when thousands of people in the different cities of the world were yesterday offering their homage to his memory, we must be content with having taken leave to have said thus much of him who will ever live in our hearts, as his deeds will in our remembrance.

PETTICOAT PENSIONS.—The Legislature of this state has granted an annuity, to a woman named Molly M'Cauley—for services which she is said to have rendered during the Revolutionary war—at which period it seems, in the character and with the spirit of a true Heroine, she endured the hardships of a camp, and encountered the dangers of the field, by the side of her husband, at that time a private in the continental troops.—We have on record a number of instances of Amazonian intrepidity, in which the actors appear to have been emulators of Joan of Arc.—Throughout the whole period of a 24 hours cannonading, between Forts George and Niagara, during the late war, a woman in the latter insisted upon doing duty in the room of her husband, who had been an artillerist in the American garrison, but who, in a reconnoitering expedition, was unfortunately captured by the British. By way of retaliating upon the enemy, for refusing the exchange of her husband, she determined that the fort should lose nothing by his absence, and actually served one of the guns, in the most exposed situation of the parapet, whilst officers and men were falling around during the whole bombardment. The Heroine of Saragossa did nothing more, and we think an annuity might be bestowed upon her with a good grace, if the Legislature of New-York would take a hint from that of Pennsylvania.

STATE LEGISLATURE.—The Loan Office Bill, was rejected on Wednesday, in the House of Representatives, by a vote of 59 to 38.

Mr. Sutherland has presented a memorial from the inspectors of the prison, the object of which is to have leave to use the Prune street apartments for confining debtors, and to remove untried prisoners and vagrants to the new prison in Arch street.

With all their rapidity of thought, and volubility of speech, we doubt whether Dr. Olapod—Dr. Pangloss, or Caleb Quotem, ever gave utterance to such a quickness of fancy—or such an avidity of expression as is contained in the following paragraph from a London paper. It out-tops George Coleman himself, and we recommend it to some of the representatives of the above named characters as an excellent tag speech to one of their hurried dialogues.

"A Correspondent writes us, that Things look round very gloomy—with falling Weather, falling Stocks, rising Irish, falling Greeks, sinking Turks, rising Russians, cooler Italians, falling Prices, ruined Farmers, rising Waters, saucy Americans, wrangling Politicians, spoiling Corn, surplus Cattle, too much, or too little of every thing, and quite enough of Grumbling.

COBBETT.—It was some time since stated in a British print, that Cobbett had thrown open the front of his house, and converted it into a Butchers Shambles, at which he sold beef upon his own account, and the same paper congratulated him upon having at last taken up a respectable calling.—He is now about establishing an evening Gazette, to be called "The Gridiron;" the title probably originates from an association of ideas with the other "calling," and whilst Mr. Cobbett sells to his eating customers, de bœuf Grillies, he may treat his reading customers with a broiling of another kind.

UNHAPPY OCCURRENCE.

Last night a man belonging to the ship Susquehannah, lying near Poole's Bridge, Kensington, was shot dead by the watchman of that vessel, as he attempted to come on board. The watchman states that he hailed him, but receiving no answer, he fired, and the man fell. They had been intimate friends a number of years. The deceased has left a wife and three children to lament his untimely end. We have not heard the result of the coroner's inquest.

The New-York papers of Thursday, were received this morning.

PRESIDET.—In consequence of the heavy fall of rain during Wednesday night, and the general thaw which followed, the Delaware, and the different streams in the adjacent country, have swelled to an unusual height. All the bridges between this city and Bristol have been carried away, and the communication with New-York thus temporarily suspended. In the neighbourhood of the Spring-House, Whitemarsh, there has been an extraordinary overflow.

The Ice in the River Schuylkill had broken up and had descended below the Flat Rock Dam on Wednesday, where its progress was arrested, and the river between that place and the Falls became completely choaked with immense bodies of Ice. In this situation it remained, the river rising and overflowing its banks, until about half past four o'clock on Thursday afternoon, when it moved down with irresistable force, and carried along with it, from off the piers and abutments, the whole of the Falls Bridge, which descended the river, passed over Fair Mount Dam, nearly entire, about 20 minutes past five o'clock, and continued its course until it reached the Permanent Bridge, at Market-street, when it struck broadside against one of the piers, and broke into numberless pieces, but did no damage. The roaring and foam of the billows, and the crush of large bodies of timber, fences, outhouses, &c. which were borne off from the shores of the river by the moving mass, exhibited an awfully grand spectacle, such as few, if any of our generation ever witnessed before.

The Ice began to move between four and five o'clock in the dam, and has passed off without doing it any apparent damage. The different improvements of the Schuylkil Navigation Company, as far as they have been heard from, are all safe.—We sincerely regret the loss of the Falls Bridge, which was valued at $35,000, as the worthy proprietors of it, sustained a similar loss a few years before.

The damages which the sudden change of temperature will occasion, must be immense, and we fear that numbers of persons have been swallowed up by the deluge in situations where assistance would be vain. The following letter from the Steam Boat Hotel, this side of Trenton Bridge, dated Feb. 21—10 o'clock at night—gives but a prelude to what may be expected:

DEAR SIR—I am just informed by persons that have come from there that both the stone bridges over the Assanpink creek between this and Trenton, are carried away—That all of that neighborhood is inundated with water, which forced several inhabitants from their houses, and that one side of one of Mr. Wells's factory has fallen, and it is presumed it will all go before morning.—It is said, at the time the lower bridge fell in there were several persons on it, and that they are lost. This intelligence is awful, but I hope it will prove not so bad as is reported.

The mail from Philadelphia could not cross, and it is stopped here, together with the passengers and mail bags. I am informed it is impossible for any person to get from this place to Trenton, or, from there here. How the lines from the two cities are to get along to-morrow is a question the morrow will reveal. The road between this and N. Brunswick is almost impassable, so much so that a horse and sleigh, with a gentleman and lady in it, coming from Princeton to Trenton this morning, in attempting to ford the road near Stony Brook so called, the horse was drowned, and with difficulty the lady was saved; and what is very remarkable, (and which will at once give you an idea of the might of the water) is that the horse this afternoon came down the Assanpink, and tumbled over the dam at Mill Hill.

The road is so dangerous between this and Philadelphia, that we have stopped our stage here, and will not permit it to proceed till morning.

A. O. SHUFF.

Mr. J. G. Jenkins.

CONGRESS.—The apportionment of Representatives in Congress, may be considered as now finally settled, for the term of ten years, at the rate of one Member for every forty thousand souls, which will give an aggregate of 213 members, exclusive of Delegates, of whom there are now only two; and will add twenty-six to the present number of members. The Bankrupt Bill still continues to occupy the debates of the House of Representatives, and it may be some time before this question is finally settled.

The President has laid certain documents before Congress, from which it appears that the American and British commissioners appointed under the fifth article of the treaty of Ghent, to ascertain and establish that part of the boundary line between the United States and the British provinces, which extends "from the source of the river St. Croix to the north westernmost head of Connecticut River," having in April last differed on the principal points submitted to them, adjourned to meet on the first Monday of April next.

Revolutionary Pensioners.—By a statement of the Secretary of War, it appears that the number of Revolutionary Pensioners placed on the roll under the act of March, 1818, amounted to 17,730——that 2,369 have been dropped under the act of May, 1820—and that the number of original claims since May, 1820, is 679.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Alexandria, (Louisiana,) dated Jan. 18th, 1822, to a gentleman in this city.

"I have to inform you of the murder of Dr. Rippey. He was killed in a rencontre with Blanchard, on Saturday last. It appears Dr. Rippey had proposed selling his plantation to Mr. Blanchard, and had given his terms in writing. Before he had received an answer, William Leonard applied for and purchased the place—Blanchard came forward when the conveyance was about to be made, and stated that he was then ready to take the land on the terms proposed.—Rippey said he was too late, alleging, he was to have given him an answer the day before. Blanchard went off and in an hour and an half, after having provided himself with a dagger, met Rippey in the street, and after a few words, told him that all his statements and pretences about the land were false, on which Rippey rode at him with a stick, which he usually walks with, and Blanchard, drawing his dagger, with one stab killed him on the spot.—Blanchard is bound over in the sum of 5000 dollars. His friends justify him completely; and you are sufficiently well acquainted with this country to know that such things are seldom punished here.

It has been a most melancholy affair.—The poor fellow had just arranged his business very handsomely, and was to have left this place in two or three weeks to return to Pennsylvania.

We have every reason to hope, from the mildness of the weather, that the Delaware will soon be delivered from its icy fetters. The ice has already separated from the wharves.

LITERATURE.

History.—Some very extraordinary documents respecting the latter days of King Charles II. have, it is said, been lately found among the records in the Herald's College.

R. Burns.—To such a length has the mania for the relics of Burns been carried in the neighborhood of Ayr, that, since the venerable rafters of Alloway Kirk have been metamorphosed into chairs and snuff-boxes, some sacrilegious enthusiasts have actually laid violent hands on the tombstone of the poet's father, which is disappearing by piece meal.

The Monthly Magazine states, that not more than 12,000 copies of any one of the Scottish novels have been sold in Great Britain.

Singular Escape.—It is not uncommon, in the Court of Sessions, when an old offender, or some one who is pretty manifestly guilty, gets clear, by some technical inaccuracy of the indictment, or partial defect in proof, for his honour the Recorder, before the prisoner is discharged and let out of the criminals' box, to give him a brief admonition of his offences, and caution him against exposing himself to be brought into similar disgraceful circumstances in future. But when, on the other hand, a prisoner is found guilty, it is scarcely ever known that any thing is said to him, from the Court, till he is brought out to receive his sentence. A deviation from the practice in the latter particular, in a case before the Sessions last week, gave occasion to an escape from justice, in a manner which, for interest, would not be unworthy of a place among the neat turns and lucky adventures in the life of a George Barrington or a Stephen Burrows.

A young chap, of the name of Brown, who had been an object of the very particular attention of the police for a length of time, was finally caught under circumstances too clear for evasion, and Thursday morning, on full trial, was convicted of a grand larceny.

His honour, entirely against the usual course, paused a moment in the business of the Court, to address him a few solemn words of admonition, on the unhappy course he had been running, and the shameful and fatal issue to which it had finally brought him. The trusty marshals, erect as their own staves, stood in solemn array around the poor culprit, and down the passage through the audience to the door. Hearing only the judge exhorting him however, and from the distance, not having heard the jury, they, from the circumstance mentioned above, at once concluded that their charge was acquitted; and the instant his honour closed, threw open the box door and issued him out with a rough, "go! go! and let us see no more of you!" Let any man make the case his own, and say if it would not have been difficult—quite impossible, to resist such real substantial politeness. A little want of the suaviter in the mode of it, notwithstanding. Brown viewed the subject in its true light—there was no time for punctilios. It was the fourth time he had escaped, by a hair's breadth, the expanded clutch of justice. In a moment he was outside of his guards and off; and conjecture is uncharitable enough to whisper, that he will not speedily be back again.

REMARKABLE FACT.

Auburn, Feb. 13.—Sundry individuals, connexions of Joseph Munger, Esq. of Paris, Oneida county, lately met together at his house, and while sitting at the tea-table it was noticed that there were individuals of five generations present, and the one of the first generation held in her arms and fed the one of the fifth generation.

Accident.—At a funeral in this town, on Tuesday, 5th inst. a Chaise was upset, containing two ladies, one of whom was seriously injured. A gentleman, in attempting to afford relief, had his arm broken. [Nantucket Inquirer.

A correspondent informs us, that at a marriage, which took place some few years ago, in this town, there were present, father and mother, son and daughter, brother and sister, uncle and aunt, nephew and niece, grandfather and grandmother, great grandmother and grandson, and all the above appellations confined to six persons. MR. PHILIPP'S.

We are much pleased at being enabled to state, that Mr. Philipps is re-engaged for six nights more at the Theatre in this city. That pleasure would be much augmented however, if we could add, that he had consented to deliver his justly celebrated LECTURES UPON MUSIC, which demanded, and obtained, the admiration of the metropolis of Ireland and excited the astonishment of the enlightened citizens of Boston. The people of this city are known to be lovers of all scientific pursuits—and we do think it a kind of duty in him, if Mr. Philipps will permit us to say so, to gratify the tastes and desires of the several classes of society who have, heretofore, had no opportunity of witnessing his wonderful powers, or of hearing his principles scientifically elucidated. There is a general expression of this desire, and we are confident he will give his ear to it.

DRAMATIC SUMMARY.

WALNUT STREET. Mr. Philipps's first engagement closed with his benefit on Monday evening, with the Maid of the Mill and other operatic entertainments—and notwithstanding the very unusual inclemency of the weather, a snow-storm prevailing, unparralelled in its effects for very many years, his benefit was honoured by the presence of a numerous audience; fashionable too as it was numerous. We are gratified to learn that he is re-engaged for six nights more.

PRUNE STREET. Mrs. Monier, whom we all know to be an engaging and interesting actress, announces for her benefit this evening, the play from John Howard Payne, called THERESE; or the Orphan of Geneva: a Monody on General Washington, and the Pantomime of Robinson Crusoe. Her merits certainly entitle her to the attention of the theatrical public, and it is earnestly to be hoped that they may keep that truth in remembrance.

FOREIGN. The receipts of three Concerts in Glasgow, produced in December upwards of 2,500*l.* sterling—out of which Madame Catalini, on one night received 760*l.* sterling—and Mr. Braham on another 260*l.* sterling—from the total sum there were delivered to the poor 200*l.* sterling.

On her passage from the Continent to England, Miss STEPHENS of the Covent Garden Theatre, was in great danger of shipwreck, in a tremendous storm on the 21st December. She arrived however safe in London, and the British public have been, before this time no doubt, gratified by her enchanting warbling, as they commonly term it.

A new piece has been got up at Drury Lane, called "Giovanni in Ireland," but it produced such an uproar, that Mr. Elliston the manager, to pacify the audience, came forward, and assured them that it should be withdrawn.

THE OLIO.

"Variety's the very spice of life,
That gives it all its flavour."

EPITAPH ON A MISER.

Beneath this verdant hillock lies
DENAR, the wealthy and the wise.
His heirs, that he might safely rest,
Have put his carcase in a chest—
The very chest in which, they say,
His other self, his money, lay.
And, if his heirs continue kind
To that dear self he left behind,
I dare believe, that four in five
Will think his better half alive.

A Mr. Hardwood had two daughters by his first wife, the eldest of whom was married to a Mr. John Coshick. This Coshick had a daughter by his first wife, whom old Hardwood married, and by her he had a son. Therefore, John Coshick's second wife could say:

My father is my son, and I'm my mother's mother;
My sister is my daughter—I'm grandmother to my brother.

All lawyers go hereafter to the Devil,
So little mischief dost thou from the laws,

THE EVILS OF BEING IN LOVE.

To be in love, where scorn is bought with groans,
Coy looks with heart-sore sighs—one fading moment's mirth
With twenty watchful, weary, tedious nights:
If haply won, perhaps, a hapless gain;
If lost, why then a grievous labour won—
However, but a folly bought with wit,
Or yet a wit with folly vanquished.

Some years ago, there was in the house of commons, two members named Montagu Mathew, and Mathew Montagu; the former a tall handsome man, and the latter a little man. During that session of parliament, the speaker having addressed the former, Montagu Mathew observed it was strange he should make such a mistake as there was as great a difference between them as between a horse chesnut and a chesnut horse.

The Earl of Chesterfield, when old, feeble, and on his last legs, was strenuously advised by his friend Sir Thomas Robinson—who was above six feet high, "to go abroad and take exercise, or he would die by inches." "If that must be the case," said the noble wit, "I am very glad I am not so tall as you, Sir Thomas."

BALM OF COLUMBIA,

An important recent Chemical discovery.

THE ladies and gentlemen of this city and elsewhere, are respectfully informed, that John Oldridge has fortunately discovered, by the power of chemistry, the grand desideratum of preventing Hair from falling off in FORTY-EIGHT HOURS. This balm will most absolutely, in the course of a short time, make the Hair grow healthy and thick. J. O. is well aware that many fraudulent and impositious Oils, &c have been imposed on the public, and therefore prejudice will be severe against his discovery, until trial shall convince his patrons that such a thing exists in nature as a certain preventative against the loss of hair. This valuable balm will cause whiskers and beards to grow rapidly. No danger need be apprehended to the human system by the application of this capillary restorative. The public may rest assured that it helps nature, and is perfectly harmless.

Prepared and sold, at $1 a pint, or 50 cents for a half pint bottle, by JOHN OLDRIDGE, No. 55½ South Front street, Philadelphia.

RECOMMENDATION.

WE, the undersigned, do hereby certify, that we have, in various cases, used the Balm of Columbia, lately discovered by John Oldridge, of Philadelphia, and have found it highly serviceable not only as a preventative against the falling off of hair, but also as a restorative. We, therefore, feel assured of its excellence, and consider it valuable and well worthy the attention of the public. In testimony whereof, we have added our respective signatures, and given it our warmest recommendation.
